

We chose the theme of the site to be a dark, pub-like color scheme, along with green to highlight the Irish aspects of the bar. We decided that a brick background would help give the website a grungy feel. One of the more important parts of the page is the bar status box. We thought whether or not a bar is open is one of the primary reasons to visit the site, so we wrote a small PHP program to test whether the bar is open, and display the result accordingly. Another thing we did was place the link to directions to the bar in multiple places, because finding the bar is another primary reason for visiting the site.